

The Elizabeth Hunter™ Insights into the Card Carrying 1001 Director

I don't mind being alone. I'm neck and neck with Agents for having the most negative stereotypes against me. I probably tend to win out though.

I'm likely to be determined in my goals and blunt in my speech. From my teen years on, I may have been seesawing between pursuing goals and upholding my morality. Introverted feeling may especially be bothersome if I try to mirror types such a Persuader, Practitioner and Appraiser in being conscientious of others, and I may struggle with dealing with others at all. I tend to like a degree of independence, it mostly just manifests as a desire for control (my way or the highway), but I also need attention and affirmation.

I tend to thrive at a sort of middle ground and I like to be in positions where I can explore my own thoughts or talk about them to a mass audience. I work well under others as long as I like my superiors and still have people under me.

I am sensitive to criticism, slow to sympathise at worst, but loyal, driven, and passionate at best. If I have a cause, I will work for it. If something or someone close to me is in danger, I will defend it.

I tend to like stability and continuity, though not to the same extreme as Specialists, Achievers, Practitioners and Objective Thinkers, who I see as 'preservers'. Sometimes I can like be tenacious, impulsive (not extremely, though) and have a tendency to reshape systems and exercise varying degrees of wrath over those over whom I have power.

I may have an artistic streak. I might switch between an iron grip on the status quo and impulsive experimentation or spinning a situation around to find a solution.

I see myself as fascinating, ridiculously misunderstood and frustrate Perfectionist types. I am very, very prone to struggling with self-image and security in my thoughts and actions. I may become stuck in toxic habits that can screw up both my life and the people around them. If I find that balance I am told that I am an incredible sight and a brilliant person.
